But why? Well, besides the colors and flavors (Chile's spring markets overflow with newly picked asparagus, artichoke, and other yummys), and the fun in the air (in September, the country celebrates its national holiday or Fiestas Patrias), when it comes to visiting Patagonia, spring is a great season to strap on those boots and get out there! And let's face it: adventuring in Patagonia is what we love best.

Spring Patagonia adventurers will be among the first to set foot in our newly revamped EcoCamp. While winter's snowy white blanket fell over the landscape, our Patagonian home was stirred into new life. Now that September is here, our brand new domes, community spaces, and even greener energy concept are ready for you to experience. We're just itching to share them with our guests.

The season's first visitors will breathe new life back into trails that were closed during the freezing winter months. Trekking paths that haven't seen a human for months is pretty dang magical - as is catching a glimpse of Patagonia's unique wildlife, something you're much more likely to do now before summer's crowds.
